

 M_P•  M_P's Profile

Posts: 23

Joined: Mon Mar 26, 2012
2:27 pm

YDNA: N1c1 father + husb.

MtDNA: H35

Posted: Wed Nov 28, 2012 1:58 pm

If you look at the birth place of Thomas Stuart, the oldest known ancestor of one person in the picture, you realize the place is Rothesay, Bute, Scotland.

"Bute is the ancestral home of the Stuart Kings of Scotland. Built over 800 years ago by a hereditary High Steward of Scotland named Stewart (later Stuart), Rothesay Castle, with its circular design and perimeter moat is unique in Scotland. It withstood many onslaughts including a Viking invasion, was captured by the English during the wars of independence, was retaken by Robert the Bruce in 1311, was partially destroyed in 1659 by Cromwell's troops, and was finally burned and sacked by the Duke of Argyll in 1685. Substantial restoration work has been undertaken over the past 120 odd years.

In the 18th century the Stuart family moved to Mount Stuart House and estate located 7 miles to the south of Rothesay."

<http://www.bute-gateway.org/heritage.shtml>

Here is more about the castle of Rothesay and also about various battles during the centuries.

http://www.undiscoveredscotland.co.uk/b ... index.html

Old royal Stuarts seem to be in the R haplogroup according to the FTDNA project.

<http://www.familyreedna.com/public/stemon=results>

By the way, a quick search shows at least one early Queen in Scotland, Margaret (1045-1016), was possibly of Rurikid origin. Her grandfather on her mother's side might have been Yaroslav I the Wise, Prince of Novgorod and Kiev.

Here is about Queen Margaret's mother

Agatha. http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Agatha,_wi ... _the_Exile

So, Scottish kings might have had good relations with Kiev during and after the times of Yaroslav the Wise. Wouldn't be surprising if there have been Kievan direction / n N1c1 men and later their descendants in the old capital of Scotland.

Please remember I'm not any historian.

 Yurgan

Posts: 88

Joined: Wed Mar 14, 2012
6:00 pm

YDNA: N1c1-Z1935

MtDNA: U4a

Posted: Fri Nov 30, 2012 8:37 am

M_P wrote:

Tawast wrote: Gentlemen, perhaps#193008 (Mats Larsson, 1755-1816) was a Forest finn. http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Forest_Finns

Yes, #193008 was a Forest Finn, here is the Forest Finn project and the kit is included:

http://www.familytreedna.com/public/for ... ction=ysnpPrince Daniel of Sweden has Forest Finnish skogfinne ancestry, So the little crown princess Estelle of Sweden has Forest Finnish roots 😊http://www.expressen.se/nyheter/brollop ... aml-anor/

Prince Daniel's father Olle Westling is active in genealogy and in the finnskogar circles. He is even the chair of the Scandinavian association Finnskogarna.com and last autumn he was speaking in Finland in a skogfinnar conference.

Here is Olle Westling's interview on his Forest Finnoish roots, with a video (in Swedish).http://sverigesradio.se/sida/artikel.as ... el=5091950Besides Forest Finnish roots, the Westlings have also old Swedish noble houses in Falun area, Stora Kopparberg etc (in Dalarna), Svinhufvud etc.*Recently I found out my father and I share those old Swedish noble roots with Westlings.*A mixed line for my father, one of his ancestors came from Stora Kopparberg to Finland. The world is really small and these ancestry networks are interlinked in surprising ways.

Great-great-grandfather of Prince Daniel of Sweden is Anders Andersson (1820 - 1884), who was born Arbrå, Bollnäs Municipality, Sweden. He was the son of Ander Eriksson (1794 - 1832)

Surname Westling received through the female line.

Can also try find relatives in the male line of Prince Daniel of Sweden.

 M_P

Posts: 23

Joined: Mon Mar 26, 2012
2:27 pm

Posted: Fri Nov 30, 2012 1:40 pm

Yurgan wrote: Great-great-grandfather of Prince Daniel of Sweden is Anders Andersson (1820 - 1884), who was born Arbrå, Bollnäs Municipality, Sweden. He was the son of Ander Eriksson (1794 - 1832)

Surname Westling received through the female line.

Can also try find relatives in the male line of Prince Daniel

YDNA: N1c1 father + husb.
MtDNA: H35

of Sweden.

I bought the book written by Björn Engström:
Daniel Westlings anor från Svartnäs.

Med kulturhistoriska utblickar i byar och miljöer under 700 år. His roots line to Svinhufvud is a mixed line. Besides these old Swedish uradel / noble roots, Westlings have also skogfinnar roots (metsäsuomalaiset, Forest Finns - a king of Sweden ordered appr 500 Finns from Savo to move to Sweden, they were known to be hard workers and with many kids).

Dag Trygslund Hoelseth: Daniel Westling's ancestry (Part II) <http://dagtho.blogspot.fi/2010/07/danie...i.html?m=1>
Last edited by M_P on Fri Dec 07, 2012 3:02 pm, edited 1 time in total.

Top

Juhani Wayrynen

Posted: Fri Nov 30, 2012 7:13 pm

Posts: 55

Joined: Sat Mar 24, 2012 7:29 am

Location: Finland

YDNA: N1c1 Z1936 CTS3223

MtDNA: U5b1b2

Mukovnikov wrote:

M_P wrote: New panel results for N86056 available. Very much according to the list above! In the higher panel 5 of 7 the markers mentioned in the list have exactly the predicted values and the rest 2 markers are +1. It's good! Haplotype of your husband belong to this cluster reliably. So we have already 8 111-marker haplotypes now. Sorry. We have already 9 111-marker haplotypes (+ Liukko 236032).

<http://www.familytreedna.com/public/rur...ycolorized>

I created the 126-haplotype 111-marker tree for N1*.

a. Rectangular

<http://koti.mbnet.fi/juhani39/Tree1a.pdf>

b. Polar

<http://koti.mbnet.fi/juhani39/Tree1b.pdf>

c. Radial

<http://koti.mbnet.fi/juhani39/Tree1c.pdf>

FR = Rurikids

SBG = Gedimins

PSB = PreSouthBaltic

A=altai, F=finnic, K=karelians, T=Tawastians, S=savonians

New SNPs of Finnish Perspective

<https://docs.google.com/spreadsheet/ccc...IY2c#gid=0>